G. O. P. ALIBIS ARE HERE

Here it comes, men, here it comes! Senator Penrose, arch stand-patter and big business representative in the senate of the United States, says there will be no tariff revision, nor will there be any general revenue legislation attempted.

This statement, by the chairman of the powerful finance committee of congress, is important. It is an admission of the failure of the Republican majority in congress to do the things that were promised last fall when the Republicans gained control of both branches of congress.

The voters will recall quite distinctly that the Republican leaders promised the elimination of the income tax burden. They did not fool everyone with that pledge but they fooled a great many. They declared the necessity for a high protective tariff when they knew that the industries of the world were in such condition following the war that there would not be a need of tariff tinkering, save in a few cases, for a number of years.

Now Senator Penrose says nothing will be done along this line unless the Republican party is given control of the next congress. In other words the game worked so well last fall that the G. O. P. leaders are planning to use it again.

They knew that there was not a chance of reducing the taxes; but they needed votes and promised it. Now they evade when they cannot deliver and tell the nation to elect a Republican congress in 1920 and all these things will be done.

The leadership, such as it is, will not change if a Republican congress is returned to power. The failure of that leadership is so apparent in this session that the American people will not care to repeat the trial.

GOVERNOR'S FIRM STAND

There has been general commendation of the firm attitude taken by Governor Cox in connection with the proposed march of over 5,000 strikers, mostly unnaturalized foreigners, from Ohio into West Virginia.

When trouble seemed most imminent the governor quickly summoned the Ohio guard to arms and the quick mobilization was most gratifying to Ohio officials for it is evidence that the new guard will live up to all of the splendid traditions of the old.

Governor Cox has made it plain that both sides in any strike controversy should be given ample latitude, and that the state's soldiery has no part in any question between employer and employee, but his assertion that the minute any situation arises wherein the elements of revolution appear, or there is an attempt to override the law of Ohio, it will not be tolerated, is a sound position.

"The spectacle of aliens establishing a code of their own on Ohio soil will not be tolerated," declared the governor.

There is no danger that anarchy and lawlessness will prevail in a state with such an efficient national guard and a governor with the courage to deal quickly and thoroughly with any elements that menace the safety and security of the commonwealth.

Instead of spending $30,000 of the state's money to find out how to run the state offices better, the esteemed legislature should devote the money to learning what kind of legislature Ohio needs.

With more employees on the payroll than ever before, the esteemed Ohio legislature made more errors than any half-dozen preceding ones combined.

"Re-elect us in 1920," cry the senate Republican leaders, "for our glorious fight against the peace and safety of America and the world."

Attorney General Price takes first prize over all comers in the "get your name in the papers" contest.

Some days fully one-third of the Republican membership of the senate is in attendance at sessions.
